Oregon and Idaho—Fair.
Washington—Fair and cooler in northeast and warmer in southwest.

THE SALMON IMBROGLIO.

The center of trouble and confusion, in the enforcement of the new fishing laws of Oregon, seems to have shifted to the Upper Columbia, and by way of adding an odd interest to the situation, Fish Warden McAllister finds himself up against his friend, and official sponsor, Frank A. Seufert, the man who did more to place Mr. McAllister where he is than anyone in either State; but to the lasting credit of both gentlemen, the Master Warden is proving himself not only honest, earnest and efficient in his new and trying duties, but quite above all claims that might be supposed to exist in favor of the north shore canner; and we hope the whole matter will be pushed to such lengths of license, laches and law, as to bring forth an issue, and an adjustment, as shall forever lay the last dispute in the industry and make it easy for all operators in both States to subscribe heartily and obey decently. The subject should never be dropped until a finality of legal agreement has been reached; it is obviously necessary, and the immense values at stake warrant the best and ultimate of all consideration.

Down here on the lower reaches of the river there seems to be a quiet, and yet ardent, desire to have the controversy quickly settled, once for all, so that all interference and rupture and loss may be averted and the men and plants engage seasonably and successfully in the work; especially if it can be done with the common consent and confirmation of Oregon and Washington and their courts. There is, or should be, a ready and efficacious route out of the turmoil, now that Mr. Seufert is primarily involved; because he is an able man, a good fighter, and rich enough to stand the stress; but above all, he is honest and amenable to the best and worst turn the law may take for him, and will abide straight-forwardly by the climax of settlement, howsoever it may affect his interests. And to this consummation all people are now looking hopefully.

THE SEA-WALL BILL.

For the moment there is a notable subsidence in the agitated interest that marked the publication, and recent comment upon, the Astoria sea-wall bill as put forth by the Council-Charter Committee; presumably for further consideration, and possibly, for amendment, both of which are due it.

Such a conclusion warrants the friendly suggestion, that since the framers of the measure were so devoted to the doctrine of excluding all legal interference with their acts, and eschewed the courts with grand and startling sweep, they might, by way of amendment, concede to the people interested in the million-dollar enterprise, the proper, and effective, play of the mayor's veto in a general way, so that recourse may be had when less careful people crop to the surface in the handling of this important work. Some such relief is indispensable among the provisions of the bill, and it will never reach common acceptance without it; nor should it be adopted without some plain and open avenue to immediate estoppel, at crises which may not be anticipated.

With a realizing sense of the urgent need of such an intervenor, and a hope that the people are not to be disappointed in the essential, along with other amendments just as potent, we are all waiting the re-appearance of the bill and will welcome it and work for it if it compels forth shorn of its most flagrant features.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES.

We believe this name is one where-with the people of the United States will do some of their gravest conjuring in the early years to come; we are not building unadvisedly when mentally, we construct a predicate that shall put New York's present governor where his predecessor stands, as the highest type we have to offer in the disposal of our great national problems of office and government. As time reveals the man, and his strength and cleanliness become daily more apparent to the thinking American, the certainty of employing him as the arch-representative of our people and investing him with all our cherished powers and standards, looms largely possible and welcome; for never again will the citizens of this country tolerate a lesser man than Roosevelt or Hughes or Cleveland, the latter-day exponents of manliness and dignity and safety in this great relation.

That Mr. Hughes has emerged from the New York gubernatorial nomination fight triumphant, without ever having raised hand or voice in his own behalf, is indicative of the extraordinary influence he so quietly wields in that commonwealth and of the universal acceptance of the man and his code. That great State is the national political barometer for us all, and even the hard-and-fast doctrine of "States rights" may not prevail against an everlasting succession from there, if she continues to thrust forth such sons as these for the Presidency. Thanks be, even Oregon is not too far away from the man and his pale of influence, to be indifferent to the ascendancy of his star, slow as it may be, or rapid; he has made his impression on the country, and unless we are wonderfully awry in our calculations and estimates, it will be many a long day before it is eradicated; which means never in this land.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always by the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

CIRCUIT COURT DOCKET SEPTEMBER TERM, 1908

The Morning Astorian offers for review the standard list of criminal and civil cases to be presented in the Honorable Circuit Court, in and for Clatsop county, and State of Oregon, conformably with the docket of that court now officially and authentically prepared and published; and in the disposition of which Hon. Thomas A. McBride, judge of the fifth judicial district, will preside at the September term, which commences on Monday next, the 21st:
